

DUAL-TRACK AI EDITION

The Voynich Manuscript

Speculative English Reconstruction Pilot

NOT A TRANSLATION. Creative reconstruction only - not a decipherment or statement of historical fact.

Pilot edition pilot-0.1.0 | 14 August 2026

Prepared with OpenAI Codex - GPT-5.6 Sol (max reasoning)

What this volume is

Mandatory label: Every English line in this document is generated from a frozen, genre-constrained literary rule. No Voynich word has been shown to mean the English word placed beside it.

The reconstruction asks a narrow creative question: if the illustrations broadly indicate herbal, astronomical, zodiacal, bathing, cosmological, pharmaceutical, and recipe-like genres, what kind of concise medieval technical prose could occupy the same line structure? It does not answer the historical question of what the unknown author actually wrote.

Generation rule

For each locus, the script keeps the source folio, locus type, token count, and EVA text. A cryptographic hash of the ruleset version, manuscript section, semantic slot, and EVA token selects words from a fixed section-specific English vocabulary. This makes the output deterministic and auditable while demonstrating that consistency alone does not prove decipherment.

Permitted and prohibited use

Permitted description	Misleading description
Speculative AI reconstruction	English translation of the Voynich Manuscript
Genre-constrained literary experiment	Decoded medieval recipe
Deterministic hypothesis generator	Evidence that a particular EVA token has this meaning

Line-by-line speculative reconstruction

Folio f1r | Text-only / control

A text-dominant opening folio with later marginal additions and the historical Tepenec signature. It is used as a control because illustration-led semantics are unavailable.
